Nicholas Desgenettes

Francois Broussais

Rene-Nicolas Dufriche, baron Desgenettes (23 May 1762 – 3 Feb 1837) was a French military doctor. He was chief doctor to the French army in Egypt and at Waterloo.

Francois Joseph Victor Broussais (17 Dec 1772 – 17 Nov 1838) was a French physician who believed in the importance of physiology. Broussais theorized bloodletting as cure to every illness and advocated the use of leeches in bloodletting procedure.
