

Red Cross

The Hellenic Red Cross is the Greek National Red Cross Society, founded on 10 June 1877 by the initiative of Queen Olga. Since the first moment of its establishment, it was recognized by the International Committee of Red Cross and today is an equal partner of the family of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement.

During its long history course, it remains devoted to the international humanitarian principles and to the generous voluntary contribution towards people.

In times of war Hellenic Red Cross offers both assistance and reinforcement of the Army Medical Personnel, nursing care for the wounded and the sick along with protection of the prisoners of war, civilians and war victims.
